

Ethics and Boundaries Webinar Series

Sessions

Sept 3
12pm CT | When Culture Impacts Decision Making

Understanding cultural concepts enables providers to bridge the difference between themselves and diverse populations. Participants will acquire a better understanding of the ethical decision-making process when cross-cultural conflicts occur while addressing implications of unconscious biases.

Oct 6
12pm CT | Considerations with Supervision in Cross-Cultural Settings

Supervisors are responsible for several key factors in supervisees' development and professional skills. Despite consultation and cultural competence being a standard for practitioners, supervisors are limited in how to provide adequate coaching and mentorship for supervisees from minoritized communities, thus exacerbating the power dynamics between supervisor and supervisee relationship.

Nov 3
12pm CT | Practicing Self-Care in An Era of Moral Distress

This training course is designed to equip professionals in the healthcare field with the knowledge, tools, and strategies to address these ethical challenges while prioritizing their own well-being. The course will provide guidance on maintaining healthy boundaries in client interactions, organizational dynamics, and professional relationships.

Sheng Lee Yang

Us 2 Behavioral Health Care

Sheng is a Licensed Clinical Social Worker and Perinatal Mental Health-Certified therapist. She holds a bachelor's degree in Criminal Justice from the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh and a master's degree in Social Work from the University of Wisconsin-Madison. Her career spans human services, healthcare, and higher education, with extensive experience addressing mental health, trauma, and systems change. From 2018 to 2023, Sheng served as a professor in the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay's Social Work Department and continues to teach continuing education courses on ethics, boundaries, diversity, and leadership. Sheng is the Founder and CEO of Us 2 Behavioral Health Care, a multicultural mental health organization committed to advancing equity and access in behavioral health.

Scan the QR for more info or visit members.sdaho.org/events

SCAN
ME! >>

